The Outing Club

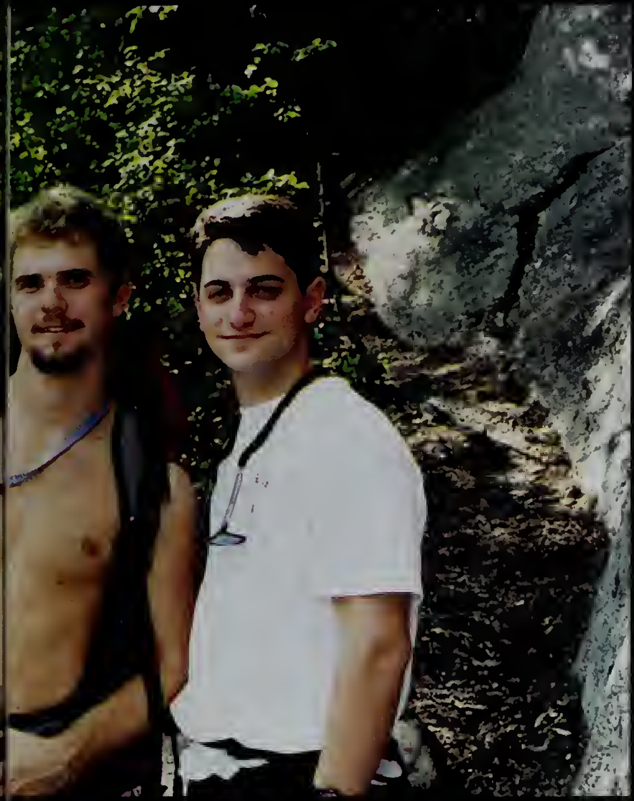
Clambake and Peak's Day

For yet another year, the Outing Club has lived up to its reputation for providing opportunities to explore the spectacular natural world surrounding Bates. With its AESOP program and activities such as the Peaks Festival, the Clambake, and Winter Carnival, almost a quarter of the campus has taken part in Outing Club events.

As always, the Annual Entering Students Outdoor Program lent first-years a chance to get a head start on adjusting to college life. Twenty four separate trips, each with ten first-years and a few upperclassmen leaders, set out over the area's mountains and rivers.

The second annual Peaks Day Festival was a great success. Peaks Week presented a coffeehouse planned by a collaboration of the Outing Club and Environmental Coalition, featuring Andrew Adams' juggling prowess, Mark Erelli's inimitable presence, and Crazy Kev's sweet rendition of Puff the Magic Dragon. Peaks Day expanded to two days, with over a hundred determined hikers and climbers ascending thirty peaks across Maine and New Hampshire.

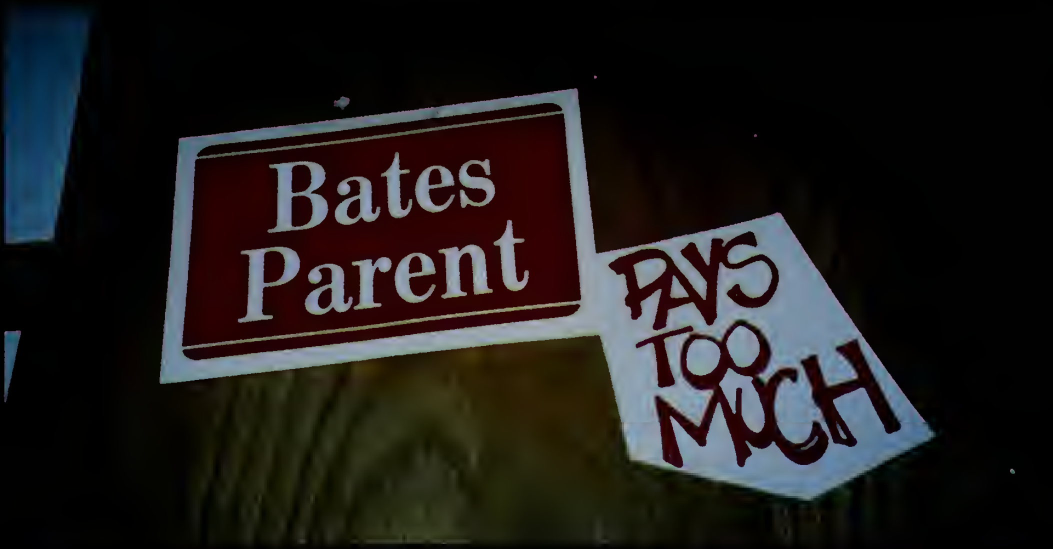
Once again, the annual Clambake took place at Popham Beach. For those who braved the elements to kayak and surf the ocean waters, there was a big old truck filled with lobsters waiting as a reward.



Though many students sought entertainmant for their families off-campus, a great deal of fun was to be found on campus. Despite the absence of "Alice's Restaurant", the highlight of the weekend was the performance given by Arlo Guthrie and his son. Student's also contributed to the weekend with performances by the Bates Choir, The Robinson Players in Satre's No Exit, The Merimanders, The Deansmen, and Strange Bedfellows.

Along with parents, athletes from Williams College were here to compete in field hockey, men's and women's soccer, and football. Woman's rugby played UNH, while man's rugby defeated Bowdoin College. Alumni Gym held an invitational volleyball tournament. Fans crowed the sidelines on every field to cheer and support the Bates Teams.

Indoors, there were a variety of panal discussions and lectures on study abroad, internships, diversity, career counseling, the arts, and Why Math Matters.
It was a vibrant weekend here at Bates.



BATES

Back To Bates

Back to Bates is a weekend loved by both former and current students alike. Clear blue skies and the vibrant colors of fall created a beautiful framework for this year's October weekend. Highlights ranged from performances by past and present Deansmen and Merimanders, to theater performances, to athletic events, to the culmination fireworks on Saturday night.

There was a mini-reunion for the recently graduated classes, and ice cream was served on Friday night to welcome the class of 2000. Music and theater performances included the play Choosing Sides for Basketball as well as The Gloria Project, which was choreographed by Michael Foley '89 to music by Vivaldi.

Everyone gathered at Garcelon field on Saturday afternoon to support the football team and to honor one of the greatest teams in Bates' Football history: the undefeated team of 1946. There was also an afternoon cookout behind Ladd Library where everyone gathered for good food and reminiscence. The festivites were concluded by the fireworks over Garcelon field, with students dispersed to different locations throughout campus to see the show. Some went to see the comedian in Alumni Gym; others sought out free pizza on the Library Quad and free cappucino in the Den. Of course, parties could be found from Frye Steet to the Village.

As loudly as the weekend came, it ended with the Sunday morning quiet of students and graduates returning to work - each looking forward to next year's weekend.

WRBC

Brings You "Trivia Night"

IN STORES NOW
CHEDDAR

Bring on the questions! More than any other night on campus, "Trivia Night" puts the education of Bates' students to the test. During this annual event, WRBC 91.5 collects a variety of questions which they zap out of the local station. Researching the answers to these often absurd questions requires using sources which range from the local encyclopedia to a long distance call to Oxfords information line; there are no boundaries.

At the end of the night, the team standing proudest was "Helium Deference." Lead by Larry Ackerman and Michael Yecies, this team was centered in Village One and composed of a core group of about fifteen people. Although another twenty to thirty people wandered in and out to join the team, the dedicated actions of the few, including a late-night jog over to the station by Larry in a formal dress and Rhonda Crosson in a suit and tie, lead to the proud victory savored by the sweet-air of "Helium Deference."

Halloween

Halloween was celebrated by all this year. Halloweenday was celebrated by students as they participated in "trick or drink," the Halloween tradition. Two days later, the Chase Hall Committee threw their annual Halloween party in the Gray Cage. Clearly, no expense was spared, with the three video screens accompaining the high tech DJ set up, and the 25 kegs of Sam Adams. Batman, the toothfairy, Edward Siccorhands, and the Chiquita Bannana ended the bash and took the opportunity to dance and party early into the morning.

An American Thanksgiving

1996 Harvest Dinner

A Note From Bob Volpi, Director of Dining Services

Welcome to this year's "An American Thanksgiving."

I am amazed by the various types of food we enjoy, how we prepare them, and the way we forge relationships around the table. Food is more than nourishment, or necessities, such as sleeping and breathing. It is an integral part of our social lives.

This year's Harvest Meal is a celebration of life and the food that sustains it. It reminds us of the vital role that food can play in enriching friendships and promoting togetherness.

Our menu features traditional Thanksgiving offerings. In addition, entrees featuring various types of food across America are also being served in Commons, the Den, Chase Lounge, and the Cage. Most of the food is prepared with locally grown organic products.

I invite you to relax and take this opportunity to strengthen relationships through fun and excitement while enjoying this year's American Thanksgiving.

The First Thanksgiving

The journey by religious separatists from Holland to the New World in the early 1600's was in search of freedom from persecution of the Anglican Church and the English. The travelers announced that they were going to settle in the New World somewhere in the Virginia colony. However, the pilgrims had no intention of settling anywhere near the English, rather they headed north to what is now Massachusettes. Only 42 people traveling on the Mayflower belonged to the Pilgrim Church, the 60 others were a melangle of crew and people of other faiths. Upon reaching Provincetown, Mass. in late 1620, the Pilgrims explored the area searching for a place to establish their colony. They settled in the now famous Plymouth. Contrary to popular belief, there were few Native Americans in that area; most had been wiped out by the smallpox plague. Arriving during the brunt of winter, half the settlers died a horrible death from disease. In early 1621, two English speaking Native Americans appeared in Plymouth colony and they saved the settlers by teaching them how to plant corn, tend the crops, and how to tap maple trees for sap. They also taught the settlers how to fish and trap furs. Because many of those living in the Plymouth colony were without financial means, they subsisted on their small agricultural, fur, and fishing trade. After that first successful harvest, the settlers held a feast in honor of the Native Americans and the initial success of the colony.

Winter Carnival

MARDI GRAS

The 1997 Winter Carnival proved, once again, to be an exciting bright spot on an otherwise bleak winter horizon. Stretching from Wednesday evening to Sunday morning, the Carnival packed a diverse series of events into the extended weekend. This year's theme was organized around Mardi Gras. On Wednesday, Commons was transformed into a "Cajun Kitchen", with dessert being served in the "Resurrection Hall", once known as Chase Lounge. Thursday provided the inimitable skate on the puddle, replete with bonfire. The Strange Bedfellows, Deansmen, Merimanders, and Crosstones put on a hilarious and entertaining coffee house afterwards in Page Lounge. To finish off the night, the sounds of The Weasels could be heard in the Ben Mays Center. Friday brought comedian Jeff Ross to Alumni Gym. On Saturday, the traditional snow sculpture competition had to be cancelled due to a lack of snow, but later that evening everyone could enjoy the Shaboo All-Stars in the Gray Cage. One could not help but marvel at the Chase Hall Committee's elaborate construction of decorations, including the wooden replication of New Orlean's French Quarter.

Formals and Parties

What would Short Term be without the weekly Den Terrace parties? Throughout the year here at Bates the changing of the seasons is not the only marker of the progressing year; students seem to plan their calendars around the Wilson House Formal, the Presidents Gala, and Halloween. Although some of these are important enough to receive their own pages, we wanted to remind you of the additional long nights and early mornings spent howling at the moon.

Short Term

The best time of the year at Bates? It finally gets warmer (but not warm) in Maine and the snow begins to melt, finals end and Short Term rolls in. One class and minimal work (unless you had to take Cell Hell, Math Camp, or History Hell). These five weeks are normally spent at the beach, shopping in Freeport, at the driving range, playing IM softball on Rand Field, naps on the quad, BBQ's, and drinking at Wednesday night Den Terrace parties. This year, fun was had by all, but we remember Short Term with clouds and rain.

Senior Week

The Final Week for the Class of 1997

Week after week, month after month, and year after year--how did those four years go by so fast? The past four years have been filled with times and experiences which come close to heaven and others which match the fires of hell. This last week marks the end of Short Term and the end of the college days for the Class of 1997. With Senior-Faculty dinner, the Pub Crawl, bar hopping in Old Port, the last Den Terrace party, the Champagne Semi-Formal, Midnight Madness, and Commencement, the last week sees a combination of emotions, bringing four special years to a successful close.

Arts

THE Arts AT Bates

Each year students at Bates produce quality works of art in a number of different mediums. Whether the impetus is gained through a class or through one's own interest, the displays of creativity remain consistent and valuable. The theater provides student-actors with a chance to explore different characters and personae while providing student audiences an exposure to ideas and emotions that often challenge everyday experience. Displays of artwork in the physical form, displays of paintings, sculpture, pottery, and photography, accomplish the same challenges, only through a more visual medium. Along with this year's art show displaying the work of teachers at Bates, the museum also displayed the success of the faculty-student relation with the annual senior thesis exhibit.

Music at Bates is varied, too. From the choir concerts to the now traditional Tuesday afternoon concert series, the Music Department gives students, faculty, staff, and the surrounding community a chance to come and hear a variety of music. Of course, one cannot fail to mention the performance of Jonathan Carter who, coming to Bates in the dead of winter, set the Chapel ablaze with a style of jazz that teetered between new and old. Though not necessarily a member of the Bates community, performances by artists such as Jonathan Carter have a direct impact on the arts at Bates, affording those interested a view into the quality to which the arts at Bates aspire.

Although a variety of these different mediums are displayed here in The Arts at Bates, including literature published in the semiannual Garnet, photographs of the senior art exhibit, a pair of theatre performances, and creative writings completed as part of English senior theses, by no means is this the limit for the many talented students who create while on campus.

Class Prez in the Science Building

The fifth floor was where they kept the rats and hamsters and other unhappy rodents to be used for experimentation in labs on the floors below. The halls were dark and no one went up there late at night, so that's where Lawrence often went to do his thinking. He was trying to generate ideas for the thesis he was working on, which was an honors thesis in case you were wondering. On night, as he strolled around, the halls unlit except for the dull red glow of the exit signs, lost in thoughts of honors and theses, Lawrence was startled by a young man coming out of one of the locked rooms in which they kept the animals. Above this particular door a sign, written in big, happy magic markers said: "Rats: White and Sexless." They young man, who had bleached blond hair, was wearing a dirty, ragged lab coat, was humming to himself as he busily locked the door, keys jingling. He looked very startled when he turned around and saw Lawrence standing there. Lawrence smiled, friendly, because that's exactly what he was: friendly. "Hi there," he said, smiling away. The young man nodded mysteriously and smiled back but he didn't respond. He had stopped humming. So, Lawrence walked on, continuing his slow, idea generating laps around the fifth floor halls. A few minutes later, as he was nearing the place where the young man had been, he encountered a strange fellow again. This time he was bent over the water fountain. As Lawrence came closer he could hear the young man swishing and spit, little drops of water sploshing over the edge of the metal and landing on the glossy floor. Lawrence cleared his throat. "Ahem!" The young man jerked back up straight, banging his head on the top of the water fountain (it was the kind that was set right into the wall like a little cave). He turned around and wiped his mouth with the yellowed sleeve of the lab coat. Lawrence smiled again, cocking his head a little to the side. "Hi there," Lawrence said, "How are you doing?" The young man tried to smile too, but big, dry sounding swallow, he looked straight at Lawrence, grinned a little, and said, "Well, good evening. How are you tonight?" Lawrence was all ready to explain to the man the nearly unbearable stresses and pressures of doing a thesis, an honors thesis nonetheless, but on the final "t" sound of "tonight" a tiny white hair shot out from the man's mouth and lay flat and wet on his lower lip. The man's gaze suddenly flicked left, over Lawrence's shoulder, and Lawrence turned to look behind him. He turned back to the man just in time to see him plucking the long white hair from where it was caught between his two front teeth. Their eyes met for a second, a long second, and the two of them were still, the man tense. "Well, gotta go!" The young man said, wiping his fingers down the front of his lab coat, and that's what he did. Lawrence stood still and watched the man as he shuffled on down the hall towards the exit sign. He heard trying to whistle and he heard him falling miserably. And then, with the click and swoosh of the opening exit door, the man disappeared. But not before emitting a fantastic tuba-blast of flatulence that echoed and bounced around the empty halls like canned thunder. It smelled, thought Lawrence, head raised and nostrils quivering, a little bit like undercooked lambchops. And then he was alone again. Alone with his ideas and the crushing burden of a rapidly approaching honors thesis deadline, and alone, with the sweet, lingering scent of undigested meat.

Yesterday
I watched your pumpkin lips-- chapped and raw-- silently sound out every word your mother had sent from West Eddington.
And you smiled
two times,
and once,
on a long word made of m's and p's your eyes crossed.
I wanted to poke your nose
to set them straight.
(And I had to remind myself that it was not my nose to poke.)
You turned to your friends and giggled for the twenty dollar bill stuck inside
the envelope.
You left the room, dropping magenta stationary in the

But I lifted it out and carried it

Gift of a Book

This is everything.
Like everything, beautiful.
Feel its fullness, its pleasant unthreatening.
Heft. Clear as a carillon.
Calm as a cold star
To which every night I sang songs
Not my own. My songs
Were the dirges of empty fields and stolen
Touchstones, not the silken madrigals
Of love. My words threw me down,
A three legged throne. But this book
Is the voice of riches, the peal
Of struggle and sin, the land which is Mine. It's waiting for me.
But the finding takes time.
For now, I'll will you
To lull into love of these Songs I wish I had written to you:
Read. Their yearning need
Is ringing.

COMING TO CENTER

At the outer edges of the Vortex the pull is less,
the draw is no stronger than a girl's fingernail.
Yet there, all is confusion, the like and dislike crowd against one another, mingling without their usual undo hesitation.
A surprise cocktail and dinner party, the guests invited pretend to get along.
Fish fly through the clumps of guests. On the far left two electrons meet and comment upon their attraction for protons.
One accidentally steps forwards as a small monkey holding a barbie doll barrels past.
The electron is shot backward and right, repelled by coming too close to his conversational friend.
For the first time authors meet their created characters face to face. Dickens' watch is lightly lifted from his waist pocket by Fagin. Mary Shelly is pursued by the monster and his creator, Frankenstein.
Heathcliff is insulting Emily Bronte.
Beauty and the Beast waltz across the tiled black and white circular floor. Dorothy clicks her heels but nothing happens.
Polite conversation abounds and all wonder, sipping the raspberry cordial, about the intention of their host.
The pull increases and things distort, dresses are torn and glasses break. The shadows are pulled up into longer and thinner lines. Everything elongates and curves,
They all slide toward the center.
The room shrinks and the guests, no longer a mingling crowd,
have the appearance of Times Square on New Year's Eve. They pack next to each other with barely enough room to lift their cups of cordial.
Someone is playing the piano. He sings 'three blind mice' over and over. Underneath him are two boys, they are tying his shoe laces together.
The compression grows greater.
Everything becomes as close as fibers in a machine woven rug.
It all is drawn inward and forced toward center.
It is surprisingly dark and unpopulated, considering all things are sucked toward it.
A final destination that none ever seem to reach.
The center of the chaotic vortex is empty, silent, and still.

CLEAN UP IN PRODUCE

Kathleen Stupakewicz

Caught in the produce aisle, next to the fresh summer squash and forced to listen to talk of doberman puppies and things that he can do with a history degree, she tilts into the silences between his words, and almost feels his breath behind her ear.

Her thoughts roam
from his words today to late August evenings on the lake and then shift to the mornings full of silences and nothing to say.

Regaining her balance, she asks of his impending fatherhood.
He winces, upset to be reminded of his girlfriend - due a week ago Tuesday.
He's only twenty one, what does everyone expect from him?
He really wants to take his history degree and move to Utah.

She doesn't bother to ask whether he will marry her, knowing that the meaning of vows and a ring would be lost on him.

Still bathing in the eighteen year old's glory that he never outgrew, he smiles and flirts;
almost touches her arm,
but she flinches across three years.

As unfair as it is, she takes comfort in the fact that something, even this, interfered with his sole possession of the world.

She remembers well
the lies and anger that hurt much more because of honest blue eyes.
And wonders what a daughter will make of a father like this boy.

Clubs and Activities

Clubs & Activities

One of the most valuable aspects of attending a school of Bates' size is the opportunity to take part in any activity or club one wishes to explore. No club is so large that it cannot take a new member, and no club is so small that there is little for a new member to tackle. Characterized by their vitality and diversity, the clubs and activities at Bates represent one of the most important parts of the College's culture. It is clubs like Amandla!, Solidaridad Latina, Sangai Asia, the Gay/Lesbian/Bi-Sexual Alliance, and others who bring voices of political, cultural, and human importance to Bates that would otherwise go unheard. Clubs like Rugby, Crew, and Freewill Folk Society give students a chance to find fun and physical exertion in a relaxed setting. It would take the whole yearbook to name every club and all the projects that they undertake. But if one unifying thing that can be said of all Bates clubs and activities, is that everyone involved works diligently and all are geared to enhance life at Bates.

Midnight Madness

The Track and Cross Country teams start off the night's festivities with a naked quad run from Adams to Frye Street and back. Then, at midnight, people gathered under the Library Terrace to party ‘till the sun came up and it was time for Graduation and the final day at Bates for the Class of 1997. Kegs were rolled in and others set-up their bars for the longest party of the year. People danced all night, hung out with old friends, chated with alums, confessed to long time crushes, and most of all, partied. As the sun started to come up, seniors headed up to Mount David for a glance at the sun rise. As Graduation Day rolled in, seniors headed home to get an hour or two of sleep, others went home to change and then pass out in their caps and gowns outside of Pettigrew. All in all, it was one of the better Bates parties.

BATES COLLEGE
RUGBY

FIELD & GIRLS CLUB

On Memorial Day, Monday, May 26th, 1997 the 131st Commencement in Bates College history was celebrated. Those attending were blessed with one of the few days during Short Term that was without rain and clouds. The Class of 1997 lined up at 9am, sunglasses on and bottles of water in hand, outside Pettigrew waiting to preform their final act as Bates students. At 10am the seniors strolled in, 5 honorary dergees were presented, speakers talked, and finally the moment everyone waited for. It was time to hand out dipolmas and then the tassels were moved from right to left. It was over, 1997 graduation was complete and everyone had made it. The Class of 1997 walked in as college students and walked out as graduates. After the ceremony, the graduates gathered with family and friends, pictures were taken and congatulations exchanged. Then everyone headed over to a buffet lunch, Common's style. Cars were packed and campus cleared out by 3pm. It was a happy and exciting day for all.

Congatulations and Best Wishes to the 1997 Graduates!

THE MIRROR

We, the Editors of the Bates College Mirror would like to thank all the people that made the production of this book possible. Without your help and support we never could have done it. We extend our thanks to:

The people in the mailing room that helped us get the '96 Yearbooks out to the graduates. Matt Arsenault for helping us to set up a space for the senior portraits. The RA for upholding our budget for the year to come. Peter Taylor for his help organizing during the year. Adam Levin, for pulling through with wonderful action shots making the sports section possible. Erik Holm '96 for letting us call him in Boston with crazy questions and always having a good piece of advise. Gene Clough for being a supportive advisor, always willing to lend a hand or take a few snapshots. Our hand goes out to Ken Murphy and Portrait Imaging Co. for an excellent job on the senior portraits and campus candids.

For the real grunt work on the book, our thanks goes out to our staff and the staff at Jostens, especially Kerry Cashion and Cole Harris. Kerry and Cole, thank you for taking care of all our requests, clearing up confusions, giving us the scoop on 90210 and for all your help and support all year long and throughout the summer months.

My special thanks goes out to Amy Clark, my best friend from 3 through life, for helping with the final pages of the book on those hot Sunday afternoons in the middle of the summer. Without your help this book would be missing 12 or so pages. I'm glad you still remember how to crop pictures.

And one last thanks to everyone that put in even just a few seconds in the production of this book.

In Loving Memory
Christopher Lee Caplice

FRIENDS

by Michael W. Smith
In loving memory of Christopher Lee Caplice

Packing up the dreams God planted
In the fertile soil of you Can't believe the hopes He's granted Means a chapter in your life is through

But we'll keep you close as always
It won't even seem you've gone
'Cause our hearts in big and small ways
Will keep the love that keeps us strong

Chorus:
And friends are friends forever
If the Lord's the Lord of them
And a friend will not say "never"
'Cause the welcome will not end
Though it's hard to let you go
In the Father's hands we know That a lifetime's not to long to live as friends

With the faith and love God's given Springing from the hope we know
We will pray the joy you'll live in
Is the strength that now you show

But we'll keep you close as always
It won't even seem you've gone
'Cause our hearts in big and small ways
Will keep the love that keeps us strong

Chirstopher Lee Caplice should have graduated with the Class of 1997, but he passed away on June 1. 1996. It would only profane his memory if those of us who did not know him were to attemp to memorialize him here. Therefore, we offer condolences and our deepest sympathies to his family and friends. These are the words of his friend, Tomas D. Spiro, Jr., originally published in the September 18, 1996 edition of The Student:

"We lived like brothers in our new environment. We offered each other comradeship, loyalty, and instilled confidence that carried us through the toughest of times. We laughed together. We shared the most joyous and memorable moments. Together we constructed a friendship that would last forever. Together we were unstoppable.

We went everywhere together, we did everything together. It was rare to see just one of us at a time. We were inseparable. He was one of 'the boys.' Although he is physically no longer with us, he offered us a piece of himself when we first came together, and his personality will live on in us. Chris Caplice will remain in our hearts forever as one of 'the boys."
